The Freedmen's Bureau report for the past year from Tennessee is largely devoted to the educational question. The duties for June of the present year are limited and 40,000 children are now instructed and fifty-five teachers and are employed; one hundred and seventy-two applications, being a gain during the year of eighteen schools and 1,078 pupils. One-third of the teachers are colored persons. The Bureau supports sixty-six teachers, the Freedmen's Association and benevolent organizations the remainder. The State law and the two schools in operation, but the Commissioner of Education thinks that colored children will not receive the benefit of the school privileges, as the opposition to their education has almost ceased. The total value of schools owned by the whites and blacks during the year was over one thousand dollars, mainly by those in low grade of education. There is now but one teacher in the State, who opposes for the cause four thousand seven hundred dollars, possess several, two thousand one hundred and thirty-four double safes. The Intelligencer and the Treasury Clique.

The Intelligencer this morning continues its assaults upon the Independent position, saying the Independents not only did nothing themselves, but took no responsible part in the proceedings of those from doing anything. The Intelligencer in the following paragraph "lies out" as the latter part of August carried up to the Democratic ranks a large number of men in active part in the organization of the Democratic clubs across the country, and in the Democratic speeches in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana previous to the October elections. He was willing to accede to the request proposed by the Independents, and to whom were heartily and sincerely anxious for his success. The proposition was scouted, however by the octogenarian New York Democrat, and the Intelligencer thinks Blair would not allow the Democratic party to be run by Independents. Blair is not to take the field, and Seymour is to be the leader, and forward every aid who sought to aid honest and wholesome advice as to the manner in which the campaign should be conducted. The Democratic clique and it done, proceeded the triumphant success of the Democracy.

Sailing Home to Vote.

Secretary Seward left last night for home. Assistant Naval Secretary Fox is expected to-day. Secretary Seward will leave for home in the morning, and Secretary Spinner started this morning for New York. A number of the members of circles left this evening also, and hundreds will start to-morrow or going to vote.

Seymour and Blair Clubs in Trouble.

At the Seymour and Blair Clubs in this city on the 26th inst. Complaint is lodged at the small attendance and slight interest. The President of one says things is all in a confused state of being abolished. A good many of the members are withdrawing and joining the Republican clubs.

General Reynolds to be Removed.

While Rumor says that General Reynolds is to be removed from command in Texas, the Postmaster finds him to be very active in executing the Secretary's orders. General Reynolds is said to be outgoing man.

All Quiet at New Orleans.

Nothing has been received for two days from General Sheridan, either at the War Department or Army Headquarters, which is indicative that things are tolerably quiet.

Deficiency in Postoffice Appropriation.

There has been no official notice at the Postoffice Department that the Secretary of the Treasury has been authorized to make a deficiency appropriation of $2,000,000 for the Postoffice Department, but it is understood

PRIVATE AUCTION SALE.

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

SEND IN THE RETURNS.

We trust our friends in every district in Allegheny county, and in every county in the State, will send in the result of Tuesday's election as early as possible. Telegraph us as soon as the result is ascertained.

The Hon. Edwin M. Stanton is announced to speak in Philadelphia on Saturday evening. In making this announcement the Bulletin remarks: "The simple announcement of the presence of the great War Minister in Philadelphia is enough to insure for him such a reception as would be extended to no other living man, Gen. Grant only excepted."

The Republican majorities for Congressmen in the State aggregate 32,386, and the Democratic majorities 28,986, leaving a net Republican majority of 3,401. The difference between the majorities for State and Congressional tickets is attributable to local causes. Our Democratic friends made a special effort in half a dozen districts, and fitted themselves that the State could be rolled on for success. Their confidence is well shaken by this time, and the result of Tuesday next will dispel any that yet remains in them.

Wherever Democrats are more outspoken as to their intentions than their more Northern brethren. Early in the campaign it was proclaimed from the Maryland swamp that the national committee should be kept out of existence, and now we find that at a Democratic meeting in Salisbury, in that State, a few days ago, two of the speakers boldly declared themselves unequivocally in favor of repudiating the public debt. Their ground was that as the rebellion had impoverished the South, of their cause, the debt incurred in suppressing the rebellion should not be paid. It is expected that Seymour and Blair will indorse in every Maryland.

We are beginning to experience in advance of Grant's election some of the good effects that will flock from the change. In view of the inevitable conflict, General Rousseau has determined to throw up his commission as Minister to Mexico. He very wisely concludes that should he enter upon his duties after Grant becomes President-elect with him will be similar to what they were immediately preceding the battle of Chickamauga, when he found himself permanently out of employment. To proceed to Mexico under such circumstances would not be worth his while, consequently, it is said, General Rousseau will not go at all, but rest on the laurels he won at White Sulphur Springs.

We have been shown a letter addressed to one of our prominent citizens by his brother, residing in New Orleans, who has been a lifelong Democrat, and who participated in the rebellion, in which the political language counts:

"I have time over to give my opinion for the benefit of my brother citizens, but in the event of my death, and therefore in the case, as no doubt, I am considered a rebel, and the feeling of the entire portion of the community is such at present, I deem it best to refrain from giving my opinion, as I do not wish to endanger your safety on account of mine."

This from a man who has resided in New Orleans twenty-three years, and has always been a staunch Democrat, conveys a volume of meaning.

Texas is a remarkable community on the part of the English people and their gentle graces in view of furnishing a sister State in the person of Prince Arsenate. The reasons advanced are very natural, though a trifle callous and circumstances. They might be fairly stated thus. The people of England would face the issue of furnishing a ready made king to hand on short notice. This would be gratifying to the proud mother, the proud people, and Mr. Arsenate himself. The people would get rid of paying him a pension, and he would have more pocket money, without borrowing from the notice. Everybody will be gainers, and nobody be losers but the Spaniards, whom nobody seems to take into consideration in these calculations. If they feel will consider themselves in the hands of a king.

U. S. McCracken has now entirely and rather mysteriously disappeared from the view of the public. This has no explanation, and it is simply that he is for reasons not yet to appear. It is said that one of the Democrats met him face to face and advised him to give Seymour the cold shoulder. Whether this be so or not, the cold shoulder appears to be all from Mr. Blair, or even since his arrival. This, also, has no explanation. Seymour's position over the Chicago Convention, which nominated McClellan and pronounced the war "a failure." The General, it is credibly believed, was bought, and for some days refused to accept with such a platform. The matter was compromised by a joint letter to himself; and it is now said that he imposes Seymour's pacific, for having spoiled his chances for the Presidency in 1864. In a word, McCracken, it is well understood, forms the centre of dissent, whom he intends to be eminently fitted for the high position.

In the event of the election imperiled next the Knights, what there would be for Seymour, what name for Blair to accept, what name for Blair to accept, what name for Blair to accept
